#IUCNcongress

Our planet is at the crossroads.

How we move global climate and sustainable development agreements into action will determine their success. Nature plays a critical role.

In September 2016, the most influential leaders from government, civil society and business will come together to present, debate and decide sustainable solutions to these global challenges.

Join Chiefs of State/Heads of Government, CEOs and leaders from NGOs, science, policy and academia at the IUCN World Conservation Congress. For the first time, the Congress will be hosted by the United States and the State of Hawai'i, an island microcosm of the wonders of nature, the threats facing it, and the solutions it can provide.

Come, be a part of defining the path to a sustainable future.
